

Translation Process Started!

Written by Mike Milkman

Saturday, 24 July 2010 19:01 - Last Updated Thursday, 03 May 2012 06:49

We noticed that many russian users visit our site. So we decided to make russian version for them. And translation is already started. We started with interface elements and will gradually get to the contents. To manage our translations we use JoomFish component. It's mainly great extension but we were not fully satisfied with original front-end module that should be used to change site language. Thus we made a modification and called it MilkJoomFish. Its main difference from original jflanguageselection module is that MilkJoomFish uses GTranslation styles (look to the top right to check it out).

If you like it you may go to the MilkJoomFish Module project page to download. It's free to use and released under GNU/GPL version 2 license